You've got Schmale

Conservative candidate Jamie Schmale will find himself outnumbered on Parliament Hill when he takes his seat as MP for Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock amongst a sea of Liberal red.

"I think we knew it was going to be a fight," Schmale said early on election night, Monday, Oct. 19 at the Cat and the Fiddle in Lindsay.

While Conservatives and NDP members across the country lost their seats, this riding remained blue with Schmale taking the lead early.

Liberal candidate David Marquis said the national results "are fantastic," though he trailed Schmale in votes throughout the evening, conceding before 11 p.m.

This was the first election as Conservative candidate for Schmale, who previously worked as executive assistant for longtime Conservative MP Barry Devolin.

Schmale's background is in radio. He worked for 91.9FM Radio in Lindsay before moving into politics 11 years ago.

According to his website, Schmale grew up in Bobcaygeon and now lives in Lindsay with his wife Julia and son Declan.

Schmale was a regular fixture at community events throughout the lengthy campaign for federal office, which began

Bridge work to be done by late November

JENN WATT

Editor

The following are brief reports of items discussed at county council committee meetings on Wednesday, Oct. 14.

The first phase of work on Haliburton's Head Lake Bridge should be complete by late November, Craig Douglas, director of public works, told the roads committee.

Phase 2 will commence in the spring and be completed by the end of June, according to the construction report presented.

Paramedicine program underperforms

Results of last year's paramedicine program, launched to assist those with medical needs who could be treated at home by paramedics, underwhelmed and frustrated councillors.

At the emergency services committee meeting, councillors said the $85,000 from the province for the program hadn't provided the services they had hoped to see. Namely, very few patients benefitted.

"It was a bomb," said Minden Hills Reeve Brent Devolin. If the county couldn't get enough interest in the paramedicine program, he said he was skeptical about whether buying equipment for telemedicine was a good idea.

"It's unfortunate that there wasn't the – we're using the polite words – but there in August. He's had plenty of practice. He helped Devolin with his campaigns in four previous elections.

Schmale campaigned on the virtues of low taxes, noting that the federal government had done much to reduce taxes already under Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Representing a long-standing government, Schmale had much to account for and found himself defending the Conservatives' record during the campaign.

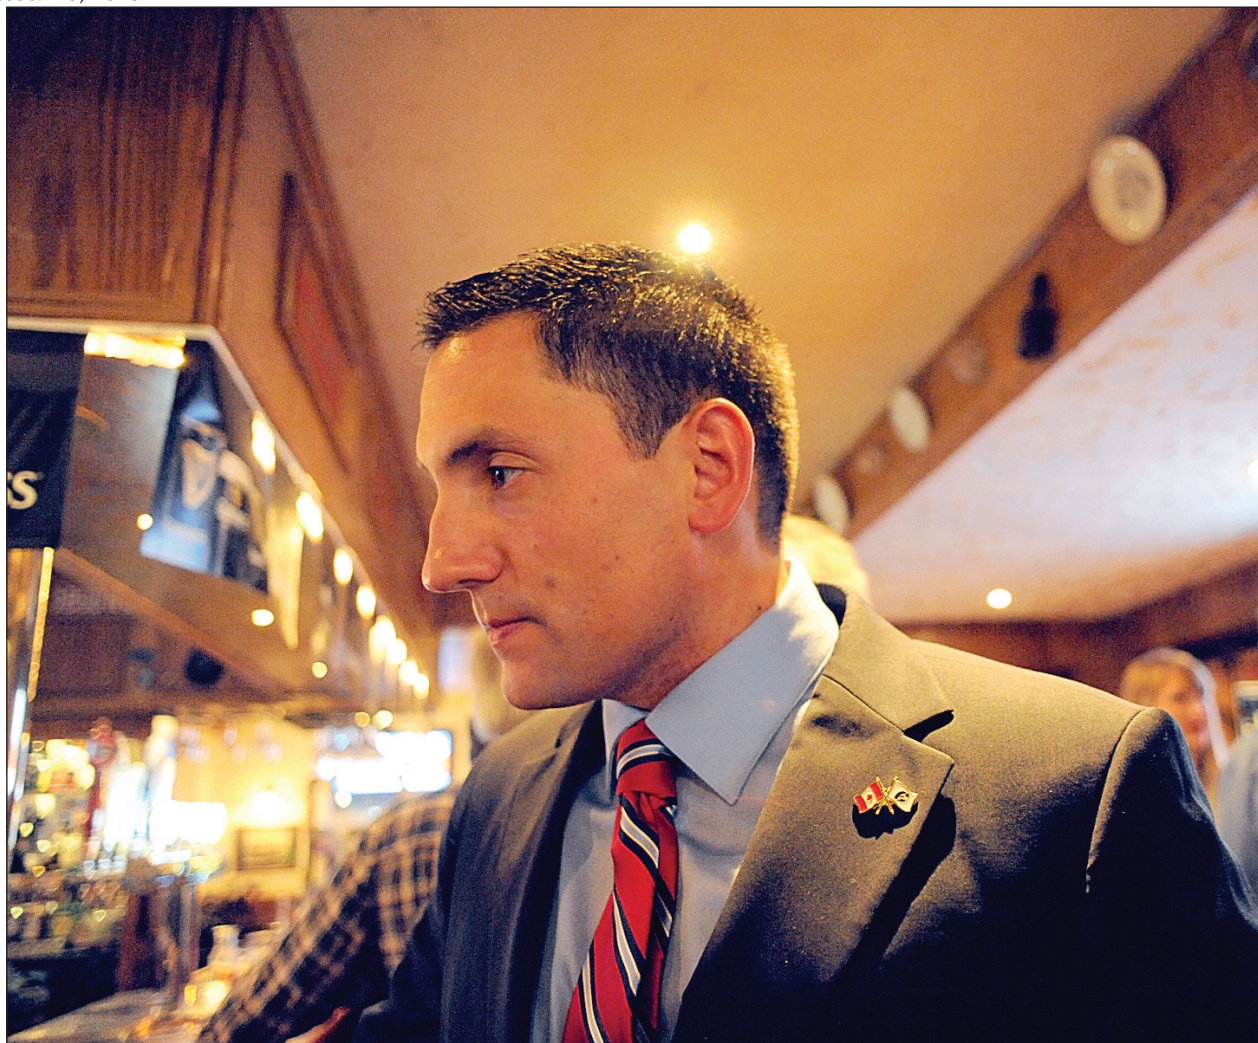

In particular, an all-candidates meeting in Haliburton in September brought to the fore many criticisms of the government's policies on the environment, military spending and social programs.

While he was the youngest candidate running for election in the riding at age 39, he has the most experience in Parliament while working for the MP, he argues.

Schmale said the time spent working for Devolin prepared him to represent Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock.

"I think that's one of my biggest advantages," Schmale said in an interview with the paper in March of 2014. "I know the players in the riding. I know the issues. The learning curve will be very small."

Go to haliburtonecho.ca for additional election coverage we couldn't provide immediately due to press deadlines or pick up a copy of the Minden Times on Thursday. Next week's Echo will have complete coverage of the federal election results for the riding.

Investigation into shooting closed, no charges laid

After two months, Haliburton Highlands OPP announced Oct. 13 that the investigation into a shooting near Haliburton is closed and no charges will be laid.

At around 6 p.m. on Aug. 16, 2015, police were called to a residence on Highway 118 in Dysart et al, just east of Haliburton.

When they arrived, they found Haliburton resident Michael Chapman, 62, dead. Another man was found alive, suffering from a gunshot wound. He was taken to hospital. His name was not released by police.

OPP told the Echo that no further information would be released on the case.

Paramedicine may be rekindled, director says wasn't the uptake. ... Hopefully something useful came out of it otherwise it was a waste of $85,000 of taxpayers' money," said Algonquin Highlands Reeve Carol Moffatt.

Director of emergency services Craig Jones said he was speaking with other jurisdictions where paramedicine was having success for ideas on physician engagement.

Haliburton paramedics now have training in gerontology and emergency services has up-to-date technology, Jones said, which could be used in the future.

"It's on the simmer. It's not boiling right now," he said, adding he was hopeful an opportunity would come along to rekindle the program.

Paramedic call volumes stable

The addition of the Tory Hill base has alleviated some of the pressure on paramedics, emergency services director Craig Jones said.

Between July and September, there were more calls than normal, but it was manageable.

"We have had a slight increase in emergency calls over previous years; however this has been mitigated by actively managing when our vehicles are available to do non-emergency calls through our deployment plan. We have seen a decrease in the number of non-emergency transfers. This frees up our ambulances to perform emergency calls within the community and only allows for the performance of non-emergency calls when all of our ambulances are available," Jones wrote in his report to the committee.

Having the base in Tory Hill meant that it was easier for paramedics to serve Highlands East and in 2015, calls serviced by paramedics outside of the county has numbered 126 compared to 147 in 2014 and 170 in 2013.

Library's e-book costs too high: councillors

County councillors were dismayed to hear the prices libraries have to pay to access e-books and the restrictions publishers put on those books after sale.

County librarian Bessie Sullivan told the finance and correspondence committee that the ability of the library to purchase current titles is hindered by the prices they have to pay.

For example, Margaret Atwood's Maddaddam series would cost about $16 for the typical consumer, but $85 for the library.

In addition, publishers put time limits or loan limits on e-books, Sullivan explained.

When the library buys a paper copy of a book, it has it until it physically falls apart. E-books, on the other hand, can be restricted to as few as 26 reads before the library must re-purchase.

The province has also recently cut the library's access to databases. With all of these pressures, Sullivan said the library board would have some difficult decisions to make.

E-books are popular with Haliburton readers as they bridge geography to library branches and come in handy when weather doesn't permit driving to get a book.

Councillors didn't appreciate the increased costs and voted to back a motion from the Association of Municipalities of Ontario to ask the Minister of Tourism, Culture and Sport to find a way to make buying e-books less costly for libraries.

Tourism dept changes things up

The Destination Guide, the county's primary tourism handout, will be changing substantially.

Tourism director Amanda Virtanen told the tourism committee that money could be saved if the booklet, which is more than 40 pages thick, was reduced or turned into a map instead.

Councillors said they liked the idea of converting to a map size with fewer advertisements. One side would feature useful information such as events or accommodations. The change would reduce the cost of the product by at least $15,000 (though the Destination Guide usually broke even or came close thanks to advertisements).

In addition, Virtanen asked if councillors would be interested in changing the name.

"Destination" is a tourism industry term, she said, and it would make more sense to use words like "explore" and "discover."

She will bring those options to the next full county council meeting for a decision.

Enhanced care brings support into the home

ANGELICA INGRAM

Staff Reporter

Janet Wood points to a wall of thank-you cards hanging in her office and begins to get emotional.

The enhanced care co-ordinator for Haliburton Highlands Health Services Community Support Services division regularly receives messages of thanks from clients who are simply grateful for the services Wood oversees.

For the past few years Wood has been co-ordinating a number of programs that help keep seniors and adults in their homes longer, services such as Home Help, Home at Last, Home Maintenance, Friendly Visiting, Security Checks, Emergency Response and more.

For many of the individuals, the services have made a significant impact.

"It's getting them home and out of the hospital," said Wood. "It's services they need at home ... it's essentially better for everyone to be at home."

Wood sees her job as being a caregiver, looking after clients who are needing assistance as they age.

The services cover a variety of things, from helping individuals with home repairs, housekeeping, snow shovelling and more.

Wood also facilitates programs that offer daily reminders to take medication or just a general phone call to check in with a client.

"Security check is offered Monday through Friday; it's a phone call," she said. "Basically five to 10 minutes, sometimes longer, and they call every day ... it's just a voice, because sometimes it's weeks before family can come up and visit."

Like the phone calls, friendly visiting also offers clients a chance to talk to someone or have a visit.

"I am in desperate need for friendly visitors. I have a waiting list right now," said

Wood.

Currently HHHS-CSS is helping about 113 clients through the enhanced care programs.

While some of the programs have costs completely covered by HHHS, others work on a fee basis, said Wood.

Many of the programs are funded through the Ministry of Health and Long Term Care and the county's four municipalities, however, CSS also relies heavily on donations, something the organization has seen go down in the past number of months.

Wood shares personal stories of her own experiences.

"There was this 92-year-old woman in Cardiff ... and two Christmases ago ... she phoned. She had been let go from the hospital, no services in place. She was palliative ... there was no food in the house ... so I drove to Cardiff, took a bunch of meals and got her situated."

The woman wrote Wood a thank-you note on an envelope for everything she had done.

"She died five days later," said Wood. "But she had been taken care of."

It's situations like that where Wood felt like she made a difference.

"It's showing that you care, that's the biggest part of it."

Wood is in need of more volunteers, especially for friendly visiting, and invites anyone interested to contact her at 705-457-2941 ext. 2928.

Police are searching for a missing 47-year-old Bowmanville man who was last seen on Oct. 2.

David Palmer's car was found near Haliburton on Oct. 14 and investigators are concerned for his well-being.

Palmer suffers from personal health issues, requires medication and has never been missing before, according to a news release issued by the Durham Regional Police Service.

He is described as a white male who is six feet tall and weighs 280 pounds, and has brown hair and blue eyes.

Police are asking for help from hunters as the search continues, with particular interest in anything that has obviously changed in the overall landscape since the previous hunting season.

"Investigators are also encouraging information related to suspicious items that appear to be out of place in the natural environment. If you find a suspicious item, do not move or touch it – clearly mark the item location and GPS co-ordinates (if available) and contact police for follow up."

Anyone with information regarding Palmer or the investigation is being asked to contact the East Division Criminal Investigations Bureau at 1-888-579-1520 ext. 1634.

HE councillor takes issue with rezoning proposal

ANGELICA INGRAM

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the Oct. 19 meeting of Highlands East council.

A rezoning proposal for a property located on Essonville Line is not sitting well with all of Highlands East council.

As previously reported in the Haliburton County Echo, the property has an existing workshop on it and is zoned rural and environmental protection. The owner would like to accommodate a small auto-repair business on the property.

Following a public meeting held on July 13, an environmental impact study was conducted by Michalski Nielsen Associates Limited to assess the potential impact of the proposed use on an adjacent provincially significant wetland.

"The report concluded that the proposed rezoning to allow the vehicle and marine maintenance business would not be detrimental to the adjacent wetland subject to the following recommendations: that the vegetated slope to the north and east of the lot be maintained as a buffer between the business and the wetland; that the size and scale of the proposed business be limited to the existing workshop; that there be no storage permitted behind the garage, that the existing vegetated area behind the garage be protected and enhanced by converting a portion (four metres) of the existing lawn to natural vegetation, that engine work occur only with the existing workshop and restrictions be placed on certain aspects of vehicle maintenance, such as winter undercoating," it read.

Further the report stated that the applicant's business could function as a suitable home industry if the scale of the business was maximized.

"I think we have a land use here that can be accommodated," said municipal planner Chris Jones.

"So you're proposing a zoning amendment that tells him how to regulate his business?" asked Councillor Joan Barton.

Aside from undercoating, the business would be prohibited from doing oil changes.

Barton took issue with the proposal and was unable to accept the stipulations, saying they were in place because of the environmental impact.

Deputy-reeve Suzanne Partridge also expressed concern about environmental impacts to the septic system.

While council was confident with the mechanic making the proposal, they had to take into consideration the property would be rezoned for all future uses and future businesses.

"It's not lost on me that council, from the get go, has been struggling with this proposal," said Jones.

A resolution to defer the application pending the execution and approval of a site plan agreement between the applicant and council was passed, with all councillors voting in favour with the exception of Barton.

Plein-air festival a success

A report from Plein-air Festival co-ordinator Gary Blundell highlighted the successes of the recent art event that took place in Highlands East on Sept. 10 to 13.

At the helm of the festival for the past two years, Blundell made a financial request that $4,900 be included in the 2016 budget to go towards the festival.

Blundell was approached by the municipality two years ago to take over the event, which is an initiative of Highlands East.

According to CAO/treasurer Sharon Stoughton-Craig's report to council, the co-ordinator's fee for the event includes the $100 registration fee from each artist, 30 per cent of all works sold and money raised from private sources.

"In the past two years, the co-ordinator has made less than $2,000/year to co-ordinate and organize the event," said her report to council.

In an email to council, Blundell made a request for an assured fee of $3,000 for the co-ordination and promotion of the festival, to help cover his costs and his time.

Not all of council agreed this request was feasible for the municipality and Councillor Barton pointed to the geocaching event and committee, which works with a smaller budget and brings in more people to the area.

Councillors agreed to defer the item to next year's budget discussions.

New CAO/treasurer

Shannon Hunter has been appointed the new chief administrative officer and treasurer.

The new employee takes over the position on Nov. 9.

She will replace longtime CAO/treasurer Sharon Stoughton-Craig, who is retiring.

A certified municipal officer with a diploma in municipal management, Hunter is coming to the municipality from the township of North Kawartha, where she was the CAO, said executive assistant Brittany Ellis in an email to the paper.

"Shannon is a Gooderham native and brings 24 years of municipal experience with her," said Ellis.

Fireworks bylaw extinguished

After many discussions about implementing a municipal fireworks bylaw, council has decided to hold off after receiving complaints from area merchants.

In his report to council, fire chief Bill Wingrove wrote he had only received one complaint about fireworks this season and it was a noise issue after 11 p.m.

"I have however had many complaints especially from retailers who feel this is not the township's business and somewhat betrayed after voluntarily pulling the flying lanterns from their shelves a few years ago. If we regulate when fireworks can be used people will buy them elsewhere and not here to avoid regulations and our businesses will probably lose sales," wrote Wingrove.

Letters from local merchants reiterated the concerns about lost business and revenue, highlighting the area's tourism economy and the need to attract cottagers and visitors.

The fire chief went on to say after speaking with tax payers and the bylaw officer, introducing a fireworks bylaw would be difficult and expensive to enforce.

"Unless trends change drastically we should not impose further regulations."

Helping refugees in Haliburton

Group to meet Friday to investigate sponsoring those fleeing persecution, war

JENN WATT

Editor

Around the world more than 60 million people have been displaced from their homeland. Syrians, who have been in the news lately due to the brutal ongoing civil war, represent the largest group with four million refugees.

On Friday, Oct. 23, St. George's Anglican Church is holding a special meeting for anyone interested in helping lessen one person's or family's burden by providing sponsorship here.

"We first thought we needed to find out more about it," said Barbara Fawcett, churchwarden at St. George's. "The refugees that came from Vietnam in the '70s to Haliburton, that was very successful at that time, so we started looking into this way back last spring."

They requested the assistance of AURA, a charitable organization that assists refugees through sponsorship and resettlement, and invited other church and community groups.

AURA's executive director Ian McBride will be attending Friday's meeting to explain what the process entails.

The Canadian government has committed to settle some 10,000 Syrian refugees within the next year.

McBride explains that the most common type of refugee case is called the "blended visa office referred," which is a refugee recommended by the Canadian government for settlement.

"Currently, blended visa office referred cases are receiving some funds from the government of Canada in order to stimulate the possibilities of Canadian charities and the like to sponsor a refugee person or family," McBride said, who has been working on refugee resettlement for more than 20 years.

When a refugee is sponsored by a community or group, the federal government will put in about half of the cost it determines will be needed during that person's first year in the country. It is up to the sponsoring group to come up with the remainder.

"Once they arrive, sometimes they can work a little bit. There's no difficulty with them working, it is more we try to make sure that they spend their time during the first 12 months making sure they learn English very well," he said.

During that time, the community will be called upon to help with food, lodging, transportation and other necessities of life.

Refugees are permanent Canadian residents and while not all of them stay in the community that originally hosts them, the vast majority remain in the host country, he said.

To hear more from McBride and talk to others interested in sponsoring a refugee, go to St. George's Anglican Church at 617 Mountain St. in Haliburton on Friday, Oct. 23. There is a free dinner at the church at 6 p.m. followed by the talk at 7 p.m.

AMO expenses total about $8,300

Digital inequality

WE USUALLY LOOK AT digital information technology as something that makes our lives easier. Certainly, it can provide access to information and resources previously inaccessible to whole portions of society.

But sometimes access comes at a disproportionately high cost.

Haliburton County's head librarian Bessie Sullivan spoke to the county finance and correspondence committee last week about the financial pressures our library system is under due to changes in the cost of and funding for digital information.

While the price of digital materials can be incredibly high, government funding for database access is dropping off.

Sullivan explained to council that e-books cost libraries much more than they cost the average consumer. And many publishers put limits on how many times a title can be taken out before the library must buy it again – sometimes the library has as few as 26 reads available before that book must be repurchased.

Here's an example: For the average person to purchase Linwood Barclay's Broken Promise, the e-book price is about $15.99. For the library: $69, according to fairpricingforlibraries.org.

Haliburton is part of a consortium of Ontario libraries that purchase together, keeping prices down and allowing local library users access to tens of thousands of titles online for the price of a few thousand dollars a year. That keeps the cost of e-books manageable, but it also means HCPL is hesitant to invest in additional titles to supplement what the consortium provides. This can lead to lengthy wait times for new and popular books.

At the same time, a three-year grant from the Ontario Ministry of Culture that paid for various databases such as Ancestry and Tumble Talking Books is drying up as of December.

Sullivan estimates it would cost the library at least $15,000 to replace those databases.

Last year, HCPL spent just more than $100,000 on all new materials, two per cent of which was for e-books. As of September, HCPL users took out more than 11,800 e-books in 2015 and rates will likely rise as patrons become more comfortable with new technology.

Which makes the current situation all the more worrisome.

Rural libraries already come with small budgets and limited resources; high prices and dwindling funding for digital information only put small towns farther behind.

Municipalities are coming together around this issue. Ours has just endorsed a statement asking the Minister of Culture to reduce the financial burden of e-books on libraries.

It's critical that the province takes up the challenge.

Libraries remain, despite the digital revolution, places focused on equality, education and community. For relatively little money, they provide a portal to lifelong learning regardless of income.

As our world shifts more heavily toward electronics, our libraries must, too. Pricing them out of that market and limiting their funding only serves to undermine those fundamental principles that make a community strong.

Viewing, being, doing

THIS PAST WEEKEND MY friends and I were out for our usual Saturday morning walk with our lovely dogs. We have really fun dogs and they take us on many adventures. It was one of those beautiful fall mornings. The air was fresh, the sky was blue and the colours were stunning. The path that we followed through the woods was a carpet of leaves that were red, orange, yellow, green and gold. The trees were shades of bronze, yellow and some orange and red and the morning light was highlighting all of them.

At one point we stopped and talked about how we feel like we live in art. We are surrounded by art and move through art in all seasons of the year up here. It is always changing and always inspiring. Of course the fall colours are what we are surrounded by right now as we drive the county roads or hike in the woods or look out our living room windows. It is incredibly beautiful everywhere. And it is beautiful in big bold colourful ways and equally beautiful in small gentle subtle ways like when we notice the beautiful spiderwebs covered in frost.

One friend told us about an article she had read in a mental health magazine about the power of nature in terms of healing and well being. The idea that nature makes us feel good. It is restoring. She told us that the research she read suggested that we heal faster and feel better and happier by viewing, being or doing something in nature.

Viewing happens when we look at nature from a window (in a hospital room or from our living room). Being happens when we spend time in nature sitting on our dock or deck or lawn chair and just being. Doing happens when we spend time in nature doing an activity like gardening, playing in the park, walking, skiing, skating, running, hiking, biking etc.

One of the many reasons I love being a Canadian is that we get to experience the four seasons and the experience of living in art is always changing. Every day I take time to enjoy these beautiful fall colours because they soon will all fall to the ground and we will move into another experience. November and the many different shades of brown and grey will surround us and be beautiful in their own way.

I think if we truly believe the world is a beautiful place, we'll find beauty (in small and big ways) in every season.

All you parents of young children need to keep taking your children outside in all the seasons, under the stars, during the full moons and by the campfires. You are teaching them to live in art. You are modelling how to look after yourself in ways that words cannot always explain but that you can feel in your heart and mind. And when we treat nature like a million dollar piece of art, we all take better care of it.

Tree rats

YESTERDAY I WAS BOWHUNTING FOR DEER from a ground blind set up on an oak ridge. After I settled in, I started making noise with a fawn call and soon caught a glimpse of three deer negotiating their way through the cedar swamp below. They were coming right towards me too.

Two broke off and went elsewhere. But the last one, a large doe, kept advancing. Since I have an antlerless licence, I readied my long bow and stayed perfectly still, hoping it would come within 20 yards and present a good shot angle. A deer like that fills the freezer with fine meat.

The doe kept coming forward but then stopped to bed down about 50 yards away. Deer do this because, unlike us, they are never in any hurry to get anywhere.

It then began calmly watching the woods, and testing the air with its sensitive nose, seemingly unaware of me. I thought I had a better than even chance of harvesting that deer. I mean it was a perfect set up. The wind was in my favour; there was food all along the ridge and my stand was nicely camouflaged and over-looking a well used trail. I was confident that sooner or later, she'd get up and walk by me.

And since I have practised consistently for the last 90 days solid, I was certain I wasn't going to miss either. Heck, I was practically counting on venison tenderloin for dinner.

And then that @#!$% squirrel showed up.

It was an eastern gray squirrel to be exact. He must have been a good friend of that doe too, because he took a position on the branch directly above me and promptly started giving me crap.

It was the kind of crap only a squirrel can give you.

I'm not actually sure what he was saying – I'm a little rusty on my squirrel.

rel. But I do know five minutes into the tirade the doe stood up, turned towards where she came from and casually walked off, flipping her white tail as she went – which is a deer way of saying goodbye. Neither she nor the others returned for the rest of that hunt.

I have never been a fan of squirrels for reasons just like this. It's bad enough that they raid your bird feeders and fruit trees. This one, however, really took the cake – it ruined a deer hunt.

I didn't move a muscle throughout its little outburst, so I couldn't actually see what he was doing. But I strongly suspect he was pointing down to me and yelling, "Hey Bambi! There's a hunter right here! Right here!"

I never stood a chance.

There was a time I thought people called them tree rats because they resembled rats in a slight way. Now I realize they call them this because they really enjoy telling on you.

Basically, they are informants, just like those on the TV detective shows. This also explains the gaudy fur.

Of course, if you watch TV detective shows, you know there are two ways to deal with informants. You either eliminate them or work with them.

I have never considered myself a bad guy, so the first option is out of the question – for now.

Working with a tree rat is going to take a bit of doing, however. Basically, I'm going to have to start feeding that squirrel every time I see it. I'll do this in exchange for silence and information on the whereabouts of the big buck.

After we build up a rapport, I'm going to have to give it cool street nickname like "Chatter Box" or "Huggy Tree."

Eventually, I hope to win it over so that I can benefit from its traitorous predilections. And maybe this arrangement will pay off in venison that will keep my family fed.

The down side is it's going to take a huge effort. The up side? Well, it's going to cost me peanuts.

Supporting a vision

To the Editor,

Did you happen to witness the creative genius of David Fougere and his daughter, Nicole, back in 2003? I did. Their show at the Northern Lights Pavilion in Haliburton was a mix of songs, stories and dance.

Did you get one of the CDs of that performance? I did. Every time I listen to it, it sends shivers up and down my spine. Did you get an email invitation to witness once again the magic of Dave and Nicole at the home of Lynn Deringer and Doug Smith on Oct. 2, 2015, for Dave's heart-felt project, The Guatemala Cataract Project? I did, and I gathered there with about 15 others donating $20 each for the project.

Once again, I was blown away by Dave and Nicole's performance. I was touched by their tale of community and how community could give Dave purpose. It seems that down in Guatemala, Dave met a humanitarian, a man by the name of Gary Sibley, who donated an $18,000 microscope to the eye clinic in Guatemala City. The owner of the clinic told him that if there were people who were legally blind in one eye from cataracts they would be treated free. David was given free cataract surgery in both eyes courtesy of Gary Sibley and the Visualiza Clinic.

Dave would like to make a video about the humanitarian work of the Visualiza ophthalmology clinic in Guatemala City. He needs funds to purchase a Sony MVI video camera and to help the poorer eye patients with their medicine and travel expenses.

Wolves' efforts dashed by penalties

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

A solid first period by the Haliburton Wolves was undone by penalties against the visiting Bradford Bulls in Greater Metro Junior A Hockey League (GMHL) action last Thursday night at the A.J. LaRue Arena in Haliburton.

A large crowd were treated to a great first period that saw the Wolves score three goals to erase a three-goal lead built by the Bulls, one of the top tier teams in the GMHL that came into Haliburton with only two losses in nine games.

Unfortunately for the fans, the Wolves surrendered four unanswered goals in the second period.

Coach Walt McKechnie was still fuming a day after the loss, questioning the officiating. He said there was an obvious discrepancy between the two teams.

"We get about 10 penalties in a row. They don't get a penalty," he said. "The kids are heartbroken. Especially the unsportsmanlike penalties they gave. There was one, two, three. You're trying to tell me their team doesn't yap? But that's the way it is."

According to the online score sheet, the Wolves finished with a total of 35 minutes of penalties, five of which were unsportsmanlike, while the Bulls finished with 16 minutes. In the second period, there were two Bulls' penalties for four minutes when the Wolves received 10 penalties for 21 minutes.

The Wolves' goals came from Malik Henry, Curtis Ballantyne, Nick Hunter and Justin Carchia.

When asked how the team moves forward from the disheartening 10-4 loss he couldn't hide his frustration and wasn't sure.

"I'm very frustrated. Our kids work so hard to get back in the game last night ... you can't kill five-on-threes for four minutes at a time. If you look at the score sheet they scored two goals right there," he said.

All four goals in the second period by the Bulls were on the powerplay.

He figures he'll be suspended for his comments to the official in the final minute of the game, which he said didn't warrant such a reaction. McKechnie received one coach misconduct in the second and another in the third period.

From mounting suspensions and injuries, it's difficult for his team to stay competitive when they are seemingly always shorthanded. Five-on-five the team is very good. They have the skill and pace to be competitive with virtually any team.

McKechnie wishes his team would catch a break to make this a reality.

Despite the challenges, whether it's the penalties or the short bench (the team had just 15 players dress – eight forwards, five defence and two goalies), he loves its determination.

"Our kids never quit. Even in the third period there they took it to them a bit. Needless to say, I don't know [what we have to do] to stay out of the penalty box. Our penalties are not a violent nature," he said.

McKechnie thought one unsportsmanlike penalty was not warranted, as he thought his player was just trying to "communicate" with the official.

Among the players not dressing include local Cole Rowden, Wolves captain, who is serving a 20-game suspension, started a few weeks ago.

Minden's Tanner Ballantyne, brother to Wolves centreman Curtis, was recently added to the roster. He played in the game against the Coldwater Falcons on Monday, Oct. 12 and will play when he can, as he is studying in Ottawa during the week.

Losing 2-0 to the Falcons in the first period, the Wolves demonstrated the fight that McKechnie praises when the team stormed back and beat the Falcons 8-3.

"It was a good effort by everybody and we came out on top," he said.

In particular, Wolves forward Tanner Hamilton finished with a hat-trick and an assist while teammate and surprise goalie phenom Motoki Watanabe, who has been stellar, finished with a .939 save percentage in the game, as he stopped 46 shots. Hamilton was the first star, followed by Watanabe as second star and rounding out the star selections was Wolves forward James Kilgore, who had four points (two goals and two assists).

The next home game is this Thursday against the Seguin Huskies at the A.J. LaRue Arena in Haliburton. Puck drops at 7:30 p.m.

Above, the Haliburton Wolves recent additions, Jayden Beaudry-Southwind has a partial breakaway against the Bradford Bulls in the third period of a Greater Metro Junior Hockey League game on Thursday, Oct. 15 at the A.J. LaRue Arena in Haliburton. The Wolves were tied 3-3 after the first period, but penalties led to four unanswered goals in the second. Haliburton lost 10-4.

Optimism and growth in loss for Hawks soccer team

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

Looking at the positives remains the focus for the Red Hawks boys' varsity soccer team after a lopsided score against the senior boys' soccer team from Port Hope High School on Thursday, Oct. 15 at the Gary G. Brohman Athletic Field.

Heading into the game against last year's all-provincial bronze medallists with the at times heavy rain and the near freezing temperatures, the Hawks had their hands full.

Hawks head coach Bob Schmidt said being able to play this strong team before their final two road games of the season allows them to see how to play well.

"It's easy to see where we need to work on ... it makes it clear this is where we need to work a little bit and again when they watch such a good team they can grasp how this is how you play it. This is how you keep the ball flowing. Just bang, bang, bang. Move the ball well. As soon as you get it you're looking for your man. Then they know where to go," he said.

It's easy to assume the Hawks were never in it with a score of 9-0, however the Hawks did have their scoring chances.

"There were times we had some good runs. We had some good plays. The ball was kicked to the right spot and if we just had a little more speed we'd be doing a little more with the ball," he said.

He said the team will continue to work on positioning and recognize when keep close to their mark and when to back off (for quicker players).

The team continues to look for its first win.

It will be competitive against Lindsay Collegiate Vocational Institute Spartans this week, Schmidt adds.

"We should have a better game against them," he said.

The Spartans tied Thomas A. Stewart Secondary School, who the Hawks also tied 3-3 at home a couple of weeks ago when they erased the three-goal deficit.

The team was not discouraged after the game and the future is bright if this team stays together.

"There's some good attitude. It's still coming. They know. I think they know too maybe next year or the year after. We're all building for a couple of years with so many Grade 9s and 10s [only four players are senior aged]," he said.

Red Hawks eyeing playoffs

DARREN LUM
Staff Reporter

The Crestwood Mustangs might not be the best team in the Kawartha High School Football team, but they sure played like it on a chilly autumn Friday, Oct. 16 at the Gary G. Brohman Athletic Field in Haliburton.

Hawks senior boys' football head coach Bruce Griffith gave a proverbial tip of his cap to the better squad from what he calls the "football school of the south."

"Crestwood has always been the football school of the south where we have been the football school of the north. I knew they would be strong. They are every year," he said.

He acknowledges his team's strengths, but recognizes how effective the Mustangs are at executing.

"We have skill. We have heart, but we don't have that smoothness they have. They have better coaches," he said, laughing.

With the temperature falling and hunting season here, it will become increasingly difficult to get players to come out to practice.

"That's why they're smoother because they practice," he said.

He adds it's the "same old thing" where that school can choose from a population of 800 students compared to just a few hundred at HHSS.

Coming in the Mustangs had one loss in three games. Its only loss coming against the Adam Scott Lions.

The most difficult part of the season schedule is over for the Hawks.

"We played all the big tough teams now. We've got St. Pete's and Fenelon Falls. I think those will be much closer games," he said.

Although a loss is never ideal, the Hawks are not feeling down about it, as they are assured of fourth spot in Kawartha, which will allow them to make the post-season.

Griffith figures it will be either Adam Scott Lions or the Mustangs though.

"That's all right it's an extra game and an extra trip to McDonald's for the boys," he said, smiling.

Blacksmithing tied to lumber industry

STEPHEN HILL

Haliburton Highlands Museum

This is the final part of a telling of Billy Baker's life in Haliburton.

Where Buck Baker excelled in the blacksmithing trade was horseshoeing. Billy had shoed horses expertly when he was younger, but as he got older, a stomach ailment prevented him from crouching for any length of time. Fortunately, Buck took to horseshoeing with ease; it came naturally to him. Working as a team, Billy would prepare a shoe on the anvil, working with a convenient factory-made blank and adding the caulks. He would throw the finished shoe at Buck's feet, straight off the anvil, and Buck would fit and nail it to the horse's hoof. Buck recalled that the Size 5 shoe seemed to be the most common size they used, and he could not ever recall his father making a horseshoe from scratch. While some lumber companies employed a full-time blacksmith for the season, others did not. The teamsters sometimes brought their teams into town to the shop, other times Buck would go into the bush to the lumber camps to do the work. On the simple horseshoeing jobs, he would take a few tools and supplies into the camp, do the work, get paid, then have a meal or a piece of pie at the camp before heading home. Traditionally, they always fed the horseshoer when he came into a camp, even when Billy was younger and able to do the shoeing himself. In the later years the job cost 25 cents per hoof, that is, $2 per team.

Baker's shop was a busy one. One of his best customers was his brother-in-law, Albert Havelock (Bert) Curry (1906-1973), a prominent Haliburton lumberman. Despite the availability of factory-made goods from outside sources, Curry had Baker produce cant hooks and similar tools for his lumbering operations. Cant hooks were one of Baker's specialties. Billy would pound out and shape the cant hook's bail (or hook) on the anvil with his sledge, while Buck held the work with the tongs. All of a cant hook's components were forged in the shop, with the exception of the nuts and bolts. Buck, living a childhood dream, had learned to operate the lathe which had once belonged to Mr. Horsley, and became proficient in turning out handles for the cant hooks. The quality of Billy's forge work on their cant hooks was unquestionable. The iron stood up to the rough use in the bush, with occasional re-sharpening of the tip. However, the wooden handles by nature had a tendency to wear out and break with use over time. Buck would often turn a supply of a good 250 cant hook stocks (handles) on the lathe each fall for the lumbermen. It was not uncommon for a lumberman to order 50 of them at a time. The finished stocks were treated by soaking them in a barrel of used motor oil, which was to make them weatherproof and believed to help toughen them.

The lumber industry began a revival from the 1930s Depression doldrums at the outbreak of the Second World War. Much volume of lumber was produced from the forests of Haliburton County to assist in the war effort. Baker's shop contributed to the cause in its own way, serving the needs of the local lumbermen. Buck enlisted in the army and left Haliburton to serve in Europe around 1943. The demand for lumber production soared as the war progressed, which was an economic boost for a forest district like Haliburton. Yet, in an ironic twist, it hastened the decline of the traditional blacksmith locally. To keep up with the demand, the Caterpillar tractor began to replace the horse in the bush, while chainsaws began to replace the faithful axe and the two-man crosscut saw. As mechanization began to replace the older methods of lumbering, the blacksmith's supporting role to the forest industry began to wane proportionally.

When the Second World War ended in 1945, the servicemen began to return home. Buck Baker returned to Haliburton discreetly on a Saturday night that fell to a fond and private reunion with his parents. "Somehow, word got around that I was home. We never found out how. Then, the first thing Monday morning, there was something like three teams of horses out in front of Dad's shop waiting for me to come and shoe them. I was just out of the army - I had hoped to sleep in that day! The fellows were all glad to see me back from overseas and were laughing and saying they hadn't had a proper shoeing job since I'd been away." Buck rejoined his father in the blacksmith shop for a short time after his discharge, but the world had changed. When discussing the future, Buck had presumed he would go back to working in the shop with his Dad and learn the trade. It was then that Billy pointed out that since the war, blacksmithing had become increasingly obsolete in Haliburton due to gas welding. As for forestry in Haliburton, the industry had become more mechanized, with horses fewer and the shoeing jobs further afield. In some cases the travel expenses exceeded the payment. After some consideration, it was decided that Buck would attend barbering school. A veterans' re-training program was available and Buck became a long-time Haliburton barber. Buck married Dorelle Austin of Haliburton (later the village postmistress) shortly after the war, and they had one child, daughter Sally. The barbering career was a wise choice.

Buck retired early, at age 58 in 1980, to pursue his outdoor interests of hunting and fishing. Technically, Buck was the last official horseshoer in the village.

Billy Baker continued to blacksmith in his shop up through the 1950s, but the demands were not as strenuous as in the pre-war days. In later years, he had to succumb to the regretful necessity of placing a lock on the shop door due to theft. Various oddments such as hooks and rings, made in advance on rainy days and hanging up for quick sale, began to disappear after hours, necessitating the lock. "I could never figure out why anyone would want to steal from Dad," reflected Buck. Billy never bothered much with book-keeping. Credit was arranged on a handshake basis. "Back in the day when a man's word meant something," according to Buck. Billy more or less retired gradually, although he continued to blacksmith intermittently until around late 1960, approximately six months before he passed away in the spring of 1961.

After Billy's death, the shop sat idle. Laura offered the shop and contents to Buck, but with his barber shop running steadily, he could foresee no immediate use for the offer and politely declined. The contents were therefore sold to a rural blacksmith from out of town and the shop was torn down. In later years, Buck regretted not saving his favourite shoeing hammer. In the early 1960s the property was bought by the Full Gospel Lighthouse congregation for the erection of a new church at 12 Dysart Ave., which was operating by 1964. The church also purchased the two-unit apartment (the former woodworking shop, by then known as the Baker Apartments). This building was torn down in the 1960s to create their parking lot. A new house was built for Laura in 1963 at 18 Dysart Ave., and Buck took over the old family home at number 14.

Billy Baker was well known and highly respected in Haliburton for his blacksmithing skill and personal integrity. Son Buck was equally well liked and known around the village. His love of the outdoors and fame as a member of the Haliburton Huskies hockey teams of the 1940s and '50s were legendary. With Buck's passing in 2004 there ended the Baker blacksmithing legacy in Haliburton, but one that is fondly remembered.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS AND HUNTING FEATURE

Staying safe while hunting from your tree stand

By Steve Galea

These days bow and gun hunters commonly use tree stands for bear, deer and moose. A properly placed stand provides a great vantage point and keeps you over the normal line of sight of the animals you're hunting. Most importantly, it keeps your scent above it all too.

But tree stands, like all hunting tools, can kill or seriously injure you if used carelessly.

Here are a few practices to help you stay safe:

Before using a stand, always read the manual or watch the product safety video. Do this frequently and certainly prior to each hunting season.

Ensure your stand is in good condition. Pay particular attention to any rust, welds and the platform. Make sure straps are not torn or frayed; confirm all parts are there.

Initially, set up your stand up in a controlled environment with good lighting, low to the ground. This will help you familiarize yourself with it in a relaxed setting.

Try to set up stands on straight, vertical, healthy, rough-barked trees of a diameter recommended in your instruction manual. If possible, avoid setting up over rocky ground or other unsafe features.

Don't skip on screw-in steps if you need them.

Don't even think about climbing into a tree stand if you are tired, suffering from dizzy spells, feeling ill, under medication, or the influence of alcohol or drugs. Better yet, don't hunt at all.

Always wear a safety harness when climbing, descending or sitting on the stand.

Stay on the ground if wind is causing the excessive tree sway or you suspect ice has built up on climbing steps, ladders or platform.

If you find yourself dozing off in a tree stand – it's easy to do – it's time to get down.

Always let someone know which stand you are using and how long you plan on staying. Text or phone if those plans change.

Never reuse a safety harness after falling out of a stand. It can no longer be guaranteed safe after it has saved you on the first fall.

Learn how to avoid suspension trauma should you find yourself hanging from a safety harness after falling out of a stand. Most harness manuals have excellent instructions on this. If not, look up these techniques on YouTube.

Know how to perform a self-rescue when hanging from your harness.

Keep your cellphone accessible.

Never carry gear while climbing into the stand. Instead, use a haul rope to raise and lower gear.

Never raise or lower a loaded firearm or crossbow.

Wear footwear that isn't clumsy or slippery on your stand's platform.

Ensure you plus your gear don't exceed the recommended weight capacity of the stand.

Do not step into a homemade tree stand unless you are absolutely certain of its safety.

Storm wins Matt Duchene Fall Classic

The Peewee A boys were No. 1 at the Matt Duchene Fall Classic tournament. They were undefeated. /Photo by Jason Glecoff

Over the weekend, the Joanne Sharpley Source For Sports Highland Storm Peewee A boys hosted the Matt Duchene Fall Classic, and won the tournament championship, going undefeated in the process.

In the first game of the round robin, the Storm were facing a familiar foe in the Sturgeon Lake Thunder.

The game was a tightly contested battle, with the two teams skating away with a 2-2 tie.

Goal scorers were Alex Little and Joe Boice, both goals unassisted.

The second game of the day had the Newcastle Stars slated as opponents. The Storm were victorious running away with this one, with an offensive supernova destroying the Stars 9-0. The score says it all in this matchup, as the Storm had three times as many goals as the Stars had shots.

In the third and final contest of the day, the boys were matched up against a very well rounded Mariposa Lightning team with lots of fire power. Our boys scored two goals a period, and stellar goaltending from Darian Maddock turned away all but one of the Lightning numerous grade A scoring chances. Leading the way in scoring were Joe Boice with two goals and an assist, Tyson Clements with a goal and an assist, Dylan Keffer with a goal and an assist, Jake Sisson and Alex Little with a goal each, Cole Prentice and Colin Glecoff added an assist each as well.

In the semi-final game the Bancroft Jets had the pleasure to contend with our powerhouse Storm. The Jets never scored until the third period after a plethora of opportunities, but the game was out of reach, as Joe Boice already scored four of his own, to take this one 4-1. Cole Prentice gain an assist on all of Joe's goals, and finished with four points. Aiden Neave and Colin Glecoff added assists.

The championship game was a rematch with the Mariposa Lightning, and subsequently was a goaltending battle with our boys sealing the deal with a 2-1 victory. Congratulations to the Joanne Sharpley's Source for Sports Highland Storm Peewee A Matt Duchene Fall Classic Champions.

Midget A Storm hosts Flames

Friday night was the home opener for Dollo's Foodland and Smolen's Dentistry Highland Storm Midget A team as they hosted the Penetang Flames. The first period had the home side in penalty trouble for most of the time frame with the visiting club jumping out to a 3-0 lead as the segment ended. Owen Patterson-Smith notched the first tally of the night for the hosting club on a power play of their own, making it 3-1 and three minutes later he scored again, both on feeds from Jadon Wood to bring the score within a goal but the visitors quickly rebutted to end the second period at 4-2. In a tight checking third period the Storm scored first midway through the time frame on a goal by Mac Rider pulling within one but the Flames scored two more shortly after to jump out to a 6-3 lead, as the Highlanders applied a flurry of pressure over the last four minutes they could only score one more by Patterson-Smith, giving him three on the night, alas ending the game as a 6-4 defeat. Jaydon Wood had three assists on the night; Kyle Lavergne had two with Jacob Haedicke and Jon Morrison one each.

For the second game of the weekend, the Dollo's Foodland and Smolen's Dentistry Highland Storm Midget A team took to the ice against the Almaguin Ice Devils in Sundridge on Sunday afternoon, Oct. 18. The team unfortunately was still down to two lines due to injuries but a lively squad took to the ice against the home team, finishing the first period down two to one, the first goal of the night was scored by Chris Thompson. The second period proved to be the best they've played this season, where the Storm ravaged the Devils, scoring four goals; a natural hat trick for Jaydon Wood with the other tally by Owen Patterson-Smith, the period finished with the visitors having a 5-4 edge. Period 3 was a see-saw battle, the home team tied it up quickly but the Storm answered with the go ahead goal halfway through. The first win of the season was in sight until a controversial Devil's goal with two seconds left on the clock tied it up and the game finished 6-6. Within seconds of their first victory of the season, a spirited effort from the entire squad was made and we look forward to the Cody Hodgson Midget Fall Classic tournament next weekend in Minden.

Bantam A Storm takes on Shamrocks

The Highland Storm Bantam A had a busy week with three games, resulting in one win and two losses. It began Tuesday, Oct. 13 in Haliburton against the Parry Sound Shamrocks. The Highland Storm grabbed a 9-2 victory.

The Highland Storm team was on fire in the first period scoring five goals, leading 5-2 after 15 minutes of play. Lucas Haedicke started it off by chipping it in past the goalie, minutes into the game, with help from Noah Black and Braeden Robinson. Minutes later, Braeden Robinson snuck in close for the second goal, passes from Shawn Walker and Nikolas Dollo. Shamrocks reacted quickly to tie it up, but not for long. Lucas Haedicke rushed up the boards and manoeuvred nicely toward the net and found the opening, assisted by Noah Black. The Highland Storm took the lead once more. It was Braeden Robinson that got the next goal, a nice pass from Shawn Walker, while on a power play. Nearing the end of the period, a hard rush by Lucas Haedicke, a pass onto the stick of Zach Morissette and he made it 5-2.

The momentum continued in the second period. The Highland Storm dominated the play. Passes from Tanner Crang and Billy Walker found James Alexander alone in front of the net and he banged in the sixth goal. Late in the second, Austin French got a power play goal, with help from Nigel Smith and Noah Black, ending the second. The Highland Storm continued to push, another rush by Lucas Haedicke, a pass off to James Alexander who found the stick of Zach Morissette and he put it away, for the eighth goal. With less than two minutes remaining in the game, Shawn Walker started the rush to centre, he found James Alexander, who passed it to Nigel Smith and he scored the final goal. Great job, boys!

The Highland Storm Bantam A team met with the Penetang Flames and suffered a 9-0 loss, Friday, Oct. 16 in Haliburton.

Saturday, Oct. 17, the Highland Storm Bantam A team travelled to Huntsville to play the Otters and returned with a 4-2 loss. The first period ended with the Highland Storm down 2-0. It was Owen Gilbert who got a breakaway and put the Storm on the scoreboard in the second. Although, the third period was full of penalties, Isaac Little's pass gave Shawn Walker a breakaway, which he capitalized on nicely. All the boys played really well.

Join us this weekend for the Cody Hodgson Fall Classic Tournament in Haliburton.

Taste of Italy nets auxiliary $15,000

JENN WATT

Editor

The Haliburton Legion was bustling on Saturday night for the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary's annual Taste of Italy fundraiser.

Artists donated a smorgasbord of pottery, paintings and sculpture, while businesses offered up free passes, tickets to sporting events, items of clothing and much more for the silent auction.

Haliburton Highlands Health Services CEO Varouj Eskedjian and auxiliary president Tracey Lear both thanked attendees for supporting the hospital with the equipment and furnishings necessary to maintain the high standard of health care the community has come to expect.

Since its inception in 1971, the local auxiliary has purchased more than $1 million worth of equipment for the hospital and long-term care unit. Saturday night's event raised another $15,000.

"Once again, people who attended seemed to have a heck of a good time as well as helped raise some very significant funds for such a good cause," said organizer Judy Skinner following the event.

Besides the Italian dinner, the auxiliary holds many other fundraisers throughout the year including the quilt raffle, wheel barrow of wine raffle, geranium tea, tag day and more.

In the last year alone, the auxiliary funded a security camera, stove for Highland Wood long-term care, privacy curtains for the emergency room, lead apron and curtains for the X-ray department, bariatric chair for triage, Christmas gifts for Highland Wood residents, chairs and tables for Highland Wood and more. Those purchases totalled just less than $70,000.

As usual, the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary's Italian Dinner at the Legion on Oct. 17, was a sell out. Health care supporters enjoyed a hearty meal, bid on auction items and donated dollars to the charity, which provides needed equipment and furnishings for the Haliburton facility. JENN WATT Staff Hospital supporters chatted with each other before dinner on Saturday at the annual Taste of Italy dinner for the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary. Beautiful and functional items were donated by community members and businesses for attendees to bid on throughout the evening. About $15,000 was raised for the Haliburton hospital.

A sweet treat for HHHSF
Sin a Bit Bakery owner Sandra Carmody of West Guilford donated $800 to the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation. Executive director Dale Walker and chairman of the board Peter Oyler accept the cheque on Tuesday, Oct. 6 at the Farmer's Market in Haliburton. Carmody, who hopes her action encourages other small businesses to give, made the contribution from partial proceeds from this year's sales at the market. Walker said the money will help with priority equipment and is part of the $300,000 annual commitment by the foundation, which has raised close $200,000 this fiscal year./DARREN LUM Staff

Halloween happenings planned for Wilberforce

Hilda Clark
448-2018

Hope everyone had a fine Thanksgiving with good food and good people with whom to share the good times.

Though it's still a couple of weeks away, kids young and old are likely planning Halloween costumes. Halloween will surely be a fun time in this area this year.

On Saturday, Oct. 31 at the Wilberforce library branch there will be some spooky fun starting at noon with a story time and crafts. Children 10 years and under should be accompanied by an adult.

Then from 2 p.m. at the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre a Halloween party will kick off. Many activities and experiences will be enjoyed. It will end before the many costumed youngsters head out for their annual treks to visit friends and neighbours for treats. More details next time.

Members of the Loop Troupe theatre group gathered for a planning session last week. The Troupe will be presenting a production in the new year. Details will be announced in a few weeks. Watch for posters, etc.

Since its formation in the summer of 1993, the Loop Troupe has entertained local audiences with a variety of productions. It continues to welcome people interested in all aspects of play production from set design, costuming, acting, stage managing, sound and lighting. To join in the fun and challenges contact Hilda at 705-448-2018.

By the time this column is being read Canadians will have cast their ballots in the federal general election. Some cheers of joy, sighs of relief or tears of disappointment may still linger. Canada may have a majority government. Or we may be in a minority situation that hopefully will be handled legally and with good grace. Chin up. Carry on, Canada.

New fitness studio opens in town

ANGELICA INGRAM

Staff Reporter

Those looking to get physically and mentally fit while enjoying a scenic view now have a new option in Haliburton Village.

Open for the past few weeks, Exhale Fitness Studio has long been a dream for Sean and Jen Chapman, the couple behind the new business.

Located in the former space of Wild Outdoors, at 163 Highland St., Exhale Fitness Studio offers a variety of classes, such as yoga sculpt, Milfit and Zumba, as well as the opportunity to use equipment in the facility.

The idea to offer fitness classes in the community came to Sean years ago, following a military deployment to Afghanistan.

For the past few years Sean has been teaching classes in the area at different locations, but saw a need for a more permanent facility following the closing of Millennium gym.

"I realized there is a need for fitness and a place for people to come and be fit," he said. "My goal here isn't to become rich. My goal is to cover rent and then anything above rent will go towards purchasing new equipment ... whatever the community puts into this place it's going to get back."

Sean says there will be a suggestion box for the public to write down what they would like to see at the studio.

Serving in the Canadian military for a number of years and going through a near death experience have taught Sean the importance of good mental health and being physically active.

A teacher at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School and certified zumba and yoga instructor, Jen is also passionate about fitness and previously taught at the Minden Hills Community Centre.

The pair are promoting the studio as a wellness facility,

"We think that fitness is mentally important and physically it can help you with healing," said Jen. "We want it to become a community hub."

Apart from a large, open space with windows overlooking Head Lake and the park, the studio has weights, a punching bag and other equipment.

With physical training done while in the military, Sean believes he has the knowledge to help people use the equipment and get in better shape.

"It's going to be a workout for anybody, it doesn't matter what your fitness level is," he said. "We'll have everything here that people will need to be fit."

The studio offers a drop-in rate of $15, five classes for $60 and a 10 class pass for $100. An unlimited monthly pass is available for $100. The first class is free.
